R.V.C. UNDER-GRAD. SOCIETY YESTERDAY

Several Important Matters Were Brought Up

ATHLETIC FEES

Changes Made in the R.V.C. Editorial Staff

Yesterday, the R. V. C. Undergraduate Society held a meeting during which several matters were considered.

The president first drew attention to the campaign that is now on foot to assist the unemployed in Montreal, and urged the students to bring their contributions to their class collectors before the end of the week.

The question of Athletic Tickets for the Men's Sport still remains an unsettled matter due to some changes that must be made in the statement of the case before it is submitted to Major Forbes.

The meeting was almost unanimous in its decision on the imprudence of another The Damsel this year, especially when the other The Damsel which was held before Christmas was so successful in raising the funds that were required.

A change was made in the usual custom of paying Daily fees to the class treasurers so that henceforth these dues will be included in the general installment of undergraduate fees that is paid to the Bursar.

A matter of much importance was brought before the meeting when the secretary read a letter or resignation from Miss Jean Affleck who is now retiring from the R. V. C. editorship of the Daily. Miss Affleck's letter expressed her gratitude for all the assistance she had received during her term of office and the excellent co-operation of all the members of her staff, and she wished the incoming officers every possible success in their new undertaking.

A vote of thanks was offered to Miss Affleck and Miss MacLaren for their splendid and faithful services and the meeting showed its appreciation and acknowledged with the generous applause was followed.

The changes in the R. V. C. Daily Staff have resulted in the following appointments:—

Editor—Miss M. MacLean
Ass. Editor—Miss A. Archibald
Night Editors—Miss M. Gilman and Miss B. Green.

JOINT MEETING OF HISTORICAL CLUBS

Papers on St. Lawrence Waterways and Cecil Rhodes

At eight o'clock to-night at the R. V. C. there will be held the second annual joint meeting of the Historical Club of the Royal Victoria College and McGill. The History of the St. Lawrence Waterways will be the subject of a paper by Miss Farr while L. H. Smith, of Arts '26 will discuss the life and work of the great British citizen Cecil Rhodes.

Last year Foster delivered an address on "Queen Caroline," and E. F. Forsey, now debating at Dalhousie spoke on Sir Robert Walpole. All members past and present are encouraged to be present this evening.

(6) ARTICLE V. Sect. 2. A.

The administration of all the business of the Students' Society shall be vested in the Executive Council.

Delete and substitute

The executive authority of the Students' Society is vested in the Students' Society Executive Council.

ARTICLE V. Sect. 2. E.

The management and control of the College paper shall be in the hands of the Executive Council through the President of such paper who sits on the Council.

OLD SCOUTS CLUB TO DISCUSS CAMPING

Howard Aikman and A. S. Allen Will Open Discussion

This evening at six o'clock the Old Scouts Club will meet in the Strathcona Hall Room "B" for their monthly supper and discussion. The subject will be "Standing and Tramping Camps" and the wide and varied experience of some of the members is bound to result in a more than usually interesting and profitable evening. The subject will be discussed from all angles embracing all types of camps, from the patrol overnight camps, and from the lone hike of the individual scout to the combined tours into foreign and unknown countries which has been the happy lot of a few troops. This subject is again one of the questions that need to be thrashed out in relation to the Canadian situation, for this reason, as well as for the personal interest, all who have had experience in camping will be heartily welcome, as the combining of all possible experience is the surest way of arriving at an adequate decision.

The form of the discussion will differ from that of the last meeting in that it will not be a debate. The subject will be presented by Howard Aikman and A. S. Allen and then thrown open for discussion.

COACH GIVES LECTURES ON FOOTBALL

First Lecture To-night 5 p.m. At Union

PRACTICAL PLAYS

Team to Work on Surveys During Summer

Coach Shaughnessy has inaugurated a series of football lectures for all interested in football. The first of these is to be delivered to-day, at 5 p.m. at the Union.

Owing to the fact that only a short time is allotted to the players prior to their opening games and that a great deal of the available time is of necessity spent in getting the men into condition, training in the finer points of the game has not received sufficient attention. It is hoped therefore that the lectures will to a great extent overcome this difficulty.

Demonstration in practical football methods will form the most important part of the coach's lectures and will include line work, opening holds, handling the ball, and so on. The judgments of the game will therefore be pointed out clearly, resulting in a saving of considerably amount of time in the autumn.

In order that prospective players may be in fair condition prior to that period of training summer employment conducive to the best physical development is being arranged for them. Work on surveys seems to offer one of the best means to attain the required end so that summer work of this kind will as far as possible take this form.

Special opportunities are therefore presented to beginners who have an inclination to play football which they will find of great practical value later.

MISS REID TO SPEAK AT S.C.A. MEETING

"The Challenge of Social Work to the Christian Student"

The regular monthly meeting of the S. C. A. of R. V. C. will be held on Thursday, February the fifth at four o'clock in the Common room. The speaker of the afternoon will be Miss May Reid, of the Federated charities of this city. Miss Reid's topic is to be "The Challenge of Social Work to the Christian Student."

Miss Reid is well known as a very capable speaker, as well as being a social worker of note. A very interesting and profitable afternoon will be spent, and it is hoped that all interested will turn out to the meeting. Tea will be served at the close of the afternoon's programme.

DR. RICHARD CABOT TODAY AT R.V.C.

Boston Doctor to Deliver Interesting Address

NOTED AUTHOR

"What Men Live By" Title of Dr. Cabot's Famous Book

Under the auspices of the School of Social Workers, a very interesting lecture is to be delivered by Dr. Richard C. Cabot of Boston and Harvard University at R. V. C. this afternoon at five o'clock.

Dr. Richard C. Cabot of Boston and Harvard University, physician, author and lecturer holds a unique position in that he is equally noted for his contributions and work in the three fields of medicine, social work and education.

Perhaps the two former phases, medicine and social work may now be regarded as a field of joint service and endeavour through the foundation of hospital social service by Dr. Cabot. In the dispensaries of twenty-five years ago, which have given place to the modern clinics, Dr. Cabot was faced with the impossibility of diagnosing a patient on a momentary examination with no reliable information as to his mentality, character, home and economic conditions, and with the disquieting knowledge that should his condition be properly diagnosed and a treatment prescribed, such treatment through ignorance and poverty in the home might never be carried out. Out of the need for someone, efficient, trained and with the time lacked by busy physicians to go into the homes of the out-door patients and make a detailed, individual study of the person, his history, circumstances and character in order to ensure the proper diagnosis and treatment and later to make sure of this treatment being carried out—Dr. Cabot saw the place for the social worker in the hospital.

In 1906 Dr. Cabot established the first full time paid social worker in the Massachusetts General Hospital. Now in every large modern hospital on the continent the social worker is an institution which has revolutionized hospital methods and is invaluable alike to doctors and patient. This achievement, with its consideration for the human elements and needs and for the physical welfare also of the hospital patient, as well as Dr. Cabot's long career as a professor of medicine at Harvard, as a physician in the hospitals of Boston and on the fields of France, and as an author of many standard medical books, have made him a great and revered figure in the medicine world. His book, "The Laymen's Handbook of Medicine" has brought to the door of the man in the street some of the erudition of the doctor and made plain the path of health and the nature of diseases, subjects so often beset with fear and ignorance.

In the educational world Dr. Cabot has long been an authority on social and ethical matters. At Harvard University he has been a lecturer in philosophy and logic, and holds the chair of social ethics at the present time. He has been a director of the Boston Children's Aid Society for twenty years.

Perhaps one reason that makes Dr. Cabot a figure of universal interest is his study and practical ideas as to the complex problems, both material and spiritual, that beset both youth and adult to-day. In his book "What Men Live By; Work, Play, Love, Worship," he brings a wealth of human understanding thought and sympathy towards outlining the methods whereby everyone may secure the best of life that civilization has to offer. As he sums up, the best prescription is "Real Life, an indefinite amount. Take a full dose after meals and at bedtime—'Real Life', then it is to mean the nourishing, sustaining and developing of existence, demands work, play, love and so much of the material and spiritual conditions as make these possible."

Without doubt there will be large audience out to hear this noted lecturer and physician, who has so graciously consented to lecture to the students of McGill to-day.

GOOD SCORES MADE IN RIFLE SHOOT

Intercollegiate Rifle Team Picked Last Saturday

The rifle club held a splendid shoot on Saturday last and despite the small amount of practice all the men turned in very good scores. The scores of those men who were picked for the intercollegiate rifle team are as follows:—

Shotwell	98
Red	98
Moore	98
Verxa	98
Pope	97
Herbert	96
Pande	96
Pate	96
Campbell-Brown	94
Wardworth	94

This makes a total of 965 out of a possible 1,000.

The other scores made during the course of the afternoon were:—

Hare	91
Manville	92
Palton	92
McCrae	92
Dawson	87
Ray	83
Pennell	82
Lyons	82

Next Saturday from 2 to 5 p.m. there will be a spoon competition at the Montreal High School rifle range. All members of the rifle club are invited to attend and shoot for the spoons.

PLAYERS CLUB PICK CASTS FOR DRAMAS

Successful Try-outs in Ball Room Yesterday

NAMES WITHHELD

Dunlop's "Pearl of Dawn" Chosen as Third Play

A meeting was held by the Casting Committee of the Players' Club in the Ball-room of the Union at five o'clock yesterday for casting. The results were on the whole even more favourable than was expected by the Committee.

The most important outcome was the choosing of the new play. Dunlop's "Pearl of Dawn," an oriental one-act in ten scenes. The ten scenes are a little misleading, for there are more correctly only two scenes with an alternation of Street Episodes before the curtain.

As yet no names have been published for castes but the two male roles in "first and last" are virtually settled. The Club would still be glad of further applications from the R. V. C. for the part of "Wanda" in this play. The part of "Peter" and "Alexis" in "Peter the Great and Alexis" are also settled but it has been thought best to withhold names until the complete caste for all three plays can be given. In "Pearl of Dawn" there is still much doubt and J. A. Taylor would be glad to hear from and other prospective Players. He may be found in the Physics Building.

Seats may be reserved by application to the Secretary and tickets will be on sale in a few days. The nights of production are Thurs. 19th., Fri. 20th., and Sat. 21st.

MANDOLIN CLUB WILL BROADCAST

All Members Must Turn out to Practices

The weekly meeting of the Mandolin and Banjo Club is to take place to-night at 7.30 at Peate's Studio. This offers a splendid opportunity for any mandolin or banjo players to sign up and the club wishes to make it known that a hearty welcome awaits any new player who wishes to turn out.

It is imperative however that all the old members be present at these practices for if the broadcast, which is to take place on Feb. 11th, is to be a success the fine progress that has been made under the direction of Mr. Perry must continue.

The executive of the Club reminds the members that only those who attend the practices regularly will be in the Club picture which is to be taken shortly.

SCARLET KEY SOCIETY WILL BE ORGANIZED BY COUNCIL

Committee Will Draw up a Constitution

AMENDMENTS

Special Students' Society Meeting on Feb. 4th

An organization to be known as "The Scarlet Key Society" with the object of properly entertaining visiting teams from sister Universities, will be instituted here shortly. The matter was brought up at a recent meeting of the Students' Council and after a few objections had been cleared away opinion was decidedly in favor of such a Society. In order to get an idea of the scope and duties of a "Key" society the Council procured a copy of the constitution of the "Green Key" at Dartmouth.

There were certain articles in this which treated of purely local conditions but the general spirit of the document may be incorporated in the "Scarlet Key" constitution which will be drawn up by a committee composed of Puddicombe, Manson and Gordon. It was agreed at the Council meeting that members of the "Scarlet Key" should be representative of the finest type of undergraduate, that they should be chosen by election and that they should wear some distinctive symbol of office. Whether it is best to limit membership to the junior years will be decided at a subsequent meeting of the Council.

The executive of the McGill Canadian Club submitted a programme of events for the remainder of the session as follows:—On February 23rd Mr. Herbert Marler will speak at 5 o'clock. During the first week in March the Governor General will address the Club. Honorable Rodolphe Lemieux has consented to speak on a date yet to be decided. It is probable that Right Honorable Arthur Meighan will accept an invitation to speak sometime in March. Arrangements made by the Club to formally unveil the panel in the ballroom received a temporary setback. Further arrangements will be announced within a short time.

A suggestion that a speaker be brought from the United States at an expense of 100 dollars was not approved by the Council. In view of the fact that speakers were not paid in preceding years it was not thought advisable to pay any this session.

The proposed amendments to the constitution of the Students' Society were discussed with a view to ascertaining whether further modifications would be desirable. It was decided to let the amendments stand as already drawn up and to submit them for approval or disapproval at the special meeting of the Students' Society on Wednesday, February fourth. It is expected that discussion at that meeting will elicit the trend of student opinion as to the merits of the amendments, and if changes are found to be desirable they will be made then.

An early start will be made in preparations for Convocation week ceremonies if plans of the Council materialize. In former years difficulty was experienced by Convocation committees in formulating and effecting plans because they were not organized until near the time of final examinations. This difficulty it was pointed out, could be avoided by the senior years if representatives were appointed in February. Notifications will be sent out by the Council to the senior years recommending that representatives for a Convocation committee be appointed during the week of February eight.

It is possible that an investigation into the cause of the great number of student failures will be instituted by the Council within a short time.

The meeting was attended by the following:—MacLean, MacMillan, Newton, Manson, Puddicombe, Goddard, Gordon, Almond, Goodson and Fletcher.

Untimely—"When I left college I didn't owe any one a cent." "What an awful time to leave."

He—"Indeed; who's the plucky man?"

WESTERN CLUB WILL SKATE AT COLISEUM

Skating Followed By Supper and Dance at Edinburgh

NO FIXED PRICE

Programmes May be Obtained from Members of Executive

On Thursday, Feb. 5th, is the date set for the Western Club skating party. It had been planned to hold this function at the M. A. A. rink but owing to the weather it was thought better to hold it at the Coliseum. The programme for the evening consists in skating until 10.30 then the party will proceed to the Edinburgh Cafe. Tables will be reserved for those who wish by communicating with the President. At the Edinburgh light refreshments will be served and of course dancing will be in order for those who wish.

Programmes for the ten bands at the Coliseum have been printed and can be obtained from members of the executive. It was decided that each member attending should pay his own expenses, that is to say, the Club has not fixed the price for the evening's entertainment. Those attending will buy their tickets at the Coliseum in the usual way. A special programme may be arranged at the Edinburgh.

It is requested that all those who intend going will inform the executive in order that reservations may be made.

Several inquiries have already been made and a good crowd of Westerners is expected at the Club's skating party next Thursday night.

THE ARTISTIC SPIRIT

When the Canadian student makes an inventory of his mental equipment and compares it with that of the English student he finds himself decidedly inferior. We have been criticized by English men for narrowness, and, at times, by Canadian graduates of English Universities. As a rule, there is no quarter from which we would not rather accept criticism than from the "just-over," and perhaps our squeamishness in this direction has a tendency to blind our eyes to the facts. But when the same verdict is given by one of our own "Colonials," we must feel, if we have not done so before, that it is time to look into it.

Looking the situation in the face, then, what is responsible for this inferiority to the English graduate? We venture to suggest that it is the lack of the artistic spirit. If we have the privilege and pleasure of conversing with an Englishman of culture, which you may, if you like, spell "culchaw," we cannot help being struck with the variety of subjects with which he is able to deal. He talks of literature, ancient and modern, of painting, statuary, of music, and generally has, up his sleeve, some pet theory as to the primitive state of man and the organization of society. If we go with him into a company of the admittedly learned, we find him at his ease, whereas we ourselves are probably compelled to keep in a corner.

Ask the Englishman what he did at the University. Probably he has not taken a remarkably high standing, but he has read. He has not confined himself to a few lecture courses, but has done something towards broadening his own horizon. In this he has been helped by one great factor, which is almost totally lacking in our own environment, namely, sympathetic conversation.

What is the attitude of a group of the McGill students, for example towards a man who, over his luncheon, broaches a subject of a more aesthetic nature than football or the comic opera? Try it some day, if you are capable of doing so, in the Union. You will be looked upon as a pedant, as a man who "talks shop," and for the simple reason that it takes at least two to a conversation, your subject however worthy it may be, will be discarded.

The reason behind this state of things is just this: We regard our education as a labour which must be got through somehow or other. Once against this toil we set our pleasures, and between the two there is a great gulf fixed. If we would stop a moment and consider, we should find that there is a possibility of bridging it and of linking the two sides. It requires a little work at first to build the bridge, but once we have done this the rest is easy. We must be interested first in those things which we have been doing hitherto as a mere matter of necessity. When we have got thus far we will find that there are a thousand by-paths leading out of our own little runway towards fields which we have never investigated. And when we yield to the temptation to find out what lies in these fields, we have made some advance towards the artistic spirit.

At this point we will begin, perhaps, to find that the comic opera, football, and other things of the kind, do not form such absolutely absorbing subjects as they once did. And if we can find other men who have been working along the same lines, the profits to be gained from their conversation is unlimited. The stimulus to be derived from this source will go farther than anything else to develop and mature the artistic spirit, which has once begun to dawn.

THE ARTISTIC SPIRIT

When the Canadian student makes an inventory of his mental equipment and compares it with that of the English student he finds himself decidedly inferior. We have been criticized by English men for narrowness, and, at times, by Canadian graduates of English Universities. As a rule there is no quarter from which we would not rather accept criticism than from the "just-over," and perhaps our squeamishness in this direction has a tendency to blind our eyes to the facts. But when the same verdict is given by one of our own "Colonials," we must feel, if we have not done so before, that it is time to look into it.

Looking the situation in the face, then, what is responsible for this inferiority to the English graduate? We venture to suggest that it is the lack of the artistic spirit. If we have the privilege and pleasure of conversing with an Englishman of culture, which you may, if you like, spell "culchaw," we cannot help being struck with the variety of subjects with which he is able to deal. He talks of literature, ancient and modern, of painting, statuary, of music, and generally has, up his sleeve, some pet theory as to the primitive state of man and the organization of society. If we go with him into a company of the admittedly learned, we find him at his ease, whereas we ourselves are probably compelled to keep in a corner.

Ask the Englishman what he did at the University. Probably he has not taken a remarkably high standing, but he has read. He has not confined himself to a few lecture courses, but has done something towards broadening his own horizon. In this he has been helped by one great factor, which is almost totally lacking in our own environment, namely, sympathetic conversation.

What is the attitude of a group of the McGill students, for example towards a man who, over his luncheon, broaches a subject of a more aesthetic nature than football or the comic opera? Try it some day, if you are capable of doing so, in the Union. You will be looked upon as a pedant, as a man who "talks shop," and for the simple reason that it takes at least two to a conversation, your subject however worthy it may be, will be discarded.

The reason behind this state of things is just this: We regard our education as a labour which must be got through somehow or other. Once against this toil we set our pleasures, and between the two there is a great gulf fixed. If we would stop a moment and consider, we should find that there is a possibility of bridging it and of linking the two sides. It requires a little work at first to build the bridge, but once we have done this the rest is easy. We must be interested first in those things which we have been doing hitherto as a mere matter of necessity. When we have got thus far we will find that there are a thousand by-paths leading out of our own little runway towards fields which we have never investigated. And when we yield to the temptation to find out what lies in these fields, we have made some advance towards the artistic spirit.

At this point we will begin, perhaps, to find that the comic opera, football, and other things of the kind, do not form such absolutely absorbing subjects as they once did. And if we can find other men who have been working along the same lines, the profits to be gained from their conversation is unlimited. The stimulus to be derived from this source will go farther than anything else to develop and mature the artistic spirit, which has once begun to dawn.

FRESHMEN VICTORS IN BASKETBALL

Play-off Resulted in Clean Close Game

STIFF CHECKING

Accurate Shooting of Bud-ding Plumber's Brings Home Win

The play off between the winners of the Freshmen and Sophomores sections took place last night at Molsons Hall. Science I and II were the opposing teams and in a fast game Science I, came off victors.

The Freshmen began the game with a rush and managed to maintain their pace throughout the two periods. The first year men showed superior combination and control and this largely accounted for their victory. Walker and McKee were perhaps the outstanding players for them and the work of these two was at times excellent.

Frith and McKee starred for the second year men and each of them turned in a fine game.

The play during the first half was remarkably fast and at the end of the period the score stood at 17 to 8 for the first year. During the second half the pace was equally fast and each team exerted itself to the utmost. The Sophomores had three opportunities to score on free shots but could only tally on one of these occasions. The game came to an end with the score 30 to 13 for Science I. Though the game was close at all times the play was remarkably clean and Mr. Moore the referee held good control throughout.

The line up was as follows:—

Science I.	Science II.
Walker	Forward
Copping	McKee
Viberg	Centre
Consiglio	Guard
Rhodes	Subs
Stockwell	Callaghan
Loring
Francis

Who Is Responsible

In a special supplement of the New York University Daily News, there appeared a symposium of opinions of prominent university professors and deans on the educational theories set forth by Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, former President of Amherst College in an essay entitled "To whom are We Responsible?" In this essay Dr. Meiklejohn maintains that educators are not responsible to the alumni, or the trustees, or the students, but only to "other seekers of truth" and "truth itself." He writes, "in the conflict with the forces within the college our teachers find themselves fighting essentially the same battle as against the forces without. In a hundred different ways the friends of the college—students, graduates, trustees, and even colleagues—seem to misunderstand its mission or to minimize or falsify its intellectual ideal."

The supplement contained the opinions of fourteen professors. Some agree in part some not at all. Only one was in entire accord with Dr. Meiklejohn, Dean Warren Waverly Phelan of the School of Education, University of Oklahoma.

Among the dissenting opinions was that of President John Martin Thomas, of Pennsylvania State College, who declared that the services of the trustees are "of great value," giving the presidents and faculties a "broadening point of view," and President W. O. Thompson of Ohio State, who declares that at least in the west "the faculties are in control." Dean Harold L. Butler of Syracuse University disagreed with Dr. Meiklejohn as to any wide-spread attempts by outside forces to control education but also disagreed with the statement of Dr. Thompson, citing the case of the University of Kansas, where in two years the governor and a political Board of Administration removed five Deans and a number of noted Faculty members.

Many of the educators expressed the opinion that the teacher owes responsibility to the "Truth," to the trustees, the alumni and the student body, thus, while not entirely agreeing with Dr. Meiklejohn they did not wholly condemn him.

Violence Wins—Albert—"What's the difference between a drama and a melodrama?"

Bernard—"Well, in a drama the heroine merely throws the villain over. In a melodrama, she throws him over the cliff."

When Time Stands Still—"I hear you gave a party last night, old chap. What was it to celebrate?"

"It was for my wife. It was the tenth anniversary of her thirtieth birthday."

SCIENCE I AND ARTS I WIN DEFAULT GAMES

Possibly owing to the bad weather, both last evening's interclass hockey games were defaulted. The Commerce I-Science I game scheduled for 6.10 was won by Science who had eight men—on hand to Commerce's three. However, by dividing up into two quite evenly matched teams, the players who did turn up availed themselves of the opportunity of a fast and strenuous workout. Wolfe, who acted as goalie for one team, was an almost impassible barrier for the opposing sextette.

The Law I-Arts I game scheduled for 6.10 was also disappointing. Both teams appeared, but neither had a goal. Law I owing to not having an extra man to replace the net-man were obliged to default to their luckier opponents who had several substitutes.

Interesting Statistics On Student Views

At Washington, D.C. recently Professor H. T. Moore, psychologist and radiologist of Dartmouth College, before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in convention assembled, announced the results of a series of radicalism tests conducted at Yale, Columbia and Dartmouth.

Professor Moore finds the undergraduates of Columbia the most radical, those of Yale the most conservative, and those of Dartmouth occupying a middle ground between the two.

The definition of a radical, according to Professor Moore, is one who answers "yes" to the questions, "Do you believe in alleviating poverty by social legislation?" and, "are you sympathetic with the political experiment now going on in Russia?", and in the negative to the question "are you prejudiced against an individual because of promiscuity in sex life?"

Various other tests showed that radical student "used their brains more quickly than conservative students of the same intelligence and from the same type of family." Professor Moore also found that the radicals were able to shake off old habits more quickly.

Torse, epigrammatical, was the comment of President Nicholas Murray Butler of "most radical" Columbia: "Important if true."

Politics and Intelligence

After the recent election Professor Moore made a study of the correlation between the intelligence and political independence of Harvard and Dartmouth undergraduates. Scholarships ranks of Harvard sophomores, Juniors and seniors, and the psychological test scores of Dartmouth freshmen were compared with the political preferences of the same students, expressed in the presidential straw votes. La Follette supporters were taken by Professor Moore as representing "more nearly the non-conformist type of political opinion than any that manifested itself in recent years."

Least any one should suspect him of having a bias in favor of La Follette, Professor Moore states that his own choice happened to be John W. Davis.

"Of the 208 La Follette men" reports Professor Moore, "whose names appear in the official rank list of Harvard University for 1923-24 the proportion that appears in the first or highest group is 4.3%. The expectation based on figures for the entire College is 2.0%. In the second, or next highest group, the La Follette percentage is 11.1%, as compared with 6.3% for the group as a whole. In the third group the figure for the La Follette men is 20.3% as compared with 14.1% for the entire College, and in the fourth group 25.5% as compared with 22.7% for the College. In the fifth, or next to the lowest group, the La Follette percentage is 25.9% as against 33.1% for the College and the sixth or lowest passing group 6.7% as compared with 15.8% for the College."

In order to test the possible objection that the La Follette supporters might not fairly be taken as the representative independent group a further study was made of the ranks of 54 members of the Harvard Liberal Club, a "organization with a membership fairly evenly distributed among Coolidge, Davis and La Follette supporters. The showing of this group was even better than that of the larger La Follette group. The figures for the 54 Liberal Club Members were 1.9% in the first group, 16.7% in the second, 29.6% in the third, 27.7% in the fourth, 16.7% in the fifth and 7.4% in the sixth. . . .

"The Psychological examination given to Freshmen at Dartmouth this year was scored in such a way that the average grade of the class was exactly 50. The average grade of the 519 Coolidge supporters was 49.6%, that of the 113 Davis supporters was 48.4% and that of the 23 La Follette supporters was 67.5. . . .

"Sixteen men who are voting for La Follette in opposition to their fathers had an average of 67.0; 35 fathers who dissented with their fathers had an average of 49.6; and 10 fathers who had an average of 53.0; and 30 men who dissented to vote for Coolidge had an average of 50.0. It is thus apparent that dissent from the political opinion of one's father is on the whole a favorable sign, regardless of what his particular opinion happens to be."

CORTOT TO GIVE RECITAL IN AFTERNOON

Chopin's Preludes to be Rendered in Jesuits Hall

EMINENT VIRTUOSO

Exceptional Opportunity Given to McGill Students

This afternoon Alfred Cortot, the famous French pianist, will give a recital at the Jesuits Hall, on Beatty Street, (below St. Catherine) at two o'clock. Arrangements have been made by the McGill Music Club to have all students and professors of McGill hear this great virtuoso at the very reasonable price of one dollar, without tax. The programme, it was hinted, will consist of all Chopin's Preludes and works by Cesar Franck, Moussorszky, and many other great composers.

The first news of this concert was heard yesterday, when a lady called the McGill Music Club and informed them that the concert was to take place. "Almost all the seats have gone," she said, "but students of McGill will be accommodated on the stage, if necessary. It was requested that all students bring one dollar bills, as there may be difficulty in changing money."

When M. Cortot played here last, at the Windsor Hall, he rendered all of Chopin's Etudes. To-day, he will be heard to even better advantage in the Preludes, which are much more in keeping with his delicate and polished execution. M. Cortot is without a doubt one of the world's greatest pianists. This name can be classed only with those of Hoffman, Friedmann, Paderewski and Rachmaninoff. It is an extraordinary bit of good luck that we will have this opportunity of hearing him. It was also asked, yesterday, that professors take advantage of the opportunity.

To-morrow evening, Cortot will give a big recital at the St. Denis Theatre, with Pablo Casals, the world's greatest cellist—a concert which no music lover will miss. Both artists have just arrived from Europe, where they have been on a tour with Jacques Thibault, the violinist.

Students and professors of McGill turned out in very large numbers at Edmund Burke's recital, last November. Although the concert this afternoon is not under McGill auspices it is certain that many both ladies and gentlemen, will attend. Those who have heard Cortot before will know how delightful his playing always is. It is doubted if any opportunity such as this has ever been offered to any student body—certainly not at McGill.

The Camels Are Coming!

I'm weary of this world of dainty little men

Always quibbling over trifling trifles

Where and when

So at long last I'm ready for the open road again—

Just a minute till I light a Camel

They have filled my foolish head with thoughts of fame,

And have prattled on with empty praise or blame,

But they can't blot out the memory of a bigger, better game—

Just a minute till I light a Camel

On the West Wind comes the smell of roses, sweet and rare,

In the East old wicked cities beckon me to come and share,

From the South a sound of singing floats above the cane—

Just a minute till I light a Camel

Just a few more months of classes, profs. and lects.

Then I'll hit the open highway with its witching terms and crooks,

For I'm dreaming of exploring half a hundred hidden nooks—

Just a minute till I light a Camel

Yes, I'm weary of this world of dainty little men

Always quibbling over trifling trifles

Where and when

But at long last I'm ready for the open road again—

Just a minute till I light a Camel

CROSSWORD MENU IS LATEST WORD IN THE POPULAR CRAZE

What is a four-letter word beginning with H and ending with H, and meaning everything left over from yesterday? Find the answer and you will be able to order your lunch.

The cross-word menu is the latest fad adopted by the business world, according to the Daily Californian. Many first-class restaurants are planning on having their entire menus written in this puzzle form. Many claim that this slight recreation gives the patrons an appetite. It is even hinted that some doctors may suggest this remedy as a cure for indigestion.

This novel idea of cross-word menus has been founded and instigated by the Twenty-one club. President Charles D. Heywood of this club and present postmaster of Berkeley, takes the credit for being the originator of the cross-word menu. He has hopes that in the near future indigestion will be completely cured by this simple and entertaining remedy.

Another Version

Scene—The Lion's Den in the court of Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon.

Time—Late evening.

Characters—A group of lions lounging lazily about the enclosures. Some are sleeping, some talking in groups, some hunting? etc. etc.

Enter Daniel. The gate clangs behind him and he stands quaking in the entry way.

First Lion, to neighbor—Holy Moses Eliphaz here's another!

Eliphaz—And here I just finished three ex-wives to the King. You eat him, Ashtoth.

Ashtoth—Eat him nothing. He's one of those greasy Jews. They're tougher than tripe. I'd as soon eat a nigger! Let one of the others do it; we've been eating all day.

Eliphaz, to others—Hey! How's for one of you fellows to get busy on this guy?

Lions all begin gnawing furiously at bones about the den. Mumbles of "I'm just finishing one of 'em," "Gimme a rest, can't you? I'm so full now it's up to my back teeth," "Eat him yourself, if you're so anxious."

Eliphaz, angrily—You're a nice clean-cut bunch of lions you are. Do you want to get us all starved for a week so we'll do a good job? Somebody has got to eat this. How about it, Menelik, you've been gold-bricking for a week now every since that Ligyran made you a little sick.

Menelik—Aw, leave a heart. That guy's all bones and tough hide. He'd play hell with a weak stomach. What are you getting greasy for? the keeper's not around.

Eliphaz—Well, it's gotta be done. Let's shake for him, then. Come on everybody, we're gonna shake around. They shake. The count falls on Menelik he of the weak stomach.

Menelik—Hey, I'm in no condition to eat pork and you all know it. And here this is brought from Jerusalem and tougher than the Queen of Sheba. Somebody be a sport and eat him for me. Aw, gee, nice guys you are! I'll be sick for a month; I know these Jerusalemites; the flavors last!

(A bugle sounds)

Well, there goes taps anyway. I can't eat him before morning now. Maybe I can down him then. Good-night, you big bums. Hope you all choke in your sleep!

The lights go out down stage first. The Lion turns in. Light fades out showing Daniel curled up in a corner by the gate creaking hard.

A very loving couple had just returned from their honeymoon.

"Hillo, dearest," said George, "I see there is some apparatus ready for cooking. Shall we go out and pick it together, love?"

To which Hilda replied, coolly, "George, dearest, it will be heavenly! You shall pick it; and I will hold the ladder."

—Tit-Bits (London)

Harold Glade—Most girls would love to go to a house party.

Fish Budge—That's how most of them get there.

Alchemy

The young husband had arrived home to find his wife in tears.

"Whatever is the matter, darling?" he inquired.

"Oh dearest!" she sobbed "I've worked hard all the afternoon making custards, because you are so fond of them, and—they've turned out to be sponge cakes!"

Coal Is Expensive

She—"George! There's a burglar at the cellar window."

He (sleepily)—"Tell him to leave it in the further bin."

Twin brother of that demon Death-O Sonnus! Hear me as I pray,

And, lest I hope to breathe that breath

Which bears me strength to fly on high,

Wave over me, as thou didst of old O'er him who was a sailor bold.

A branch scaped in Lethean dew,

A branch which deep in Hades grew,

INTERMEDIATES TO PLAY U. OF M.

Exciting Struggle is Predicted

To-day the McGill Intermediate hockey team is playing University of Montreal at the Forum and it is highly probable that a good crowd will be on hand to witness the encounter. The line up will probably be made up of the following stellar puck chasers who are at present in excellent form: goal, R. Quinlan, defence, Mc Gerrige, Smith, centre, Dion, Wings Thompson and Roncarelli. In the last encounter Loyola came out on the long end of a 3-1 score, but they had to work to do it, and it is quite possible that McGill will retaliate to-morrow.

Why?

Russia, the leader of world thought put into action, has made the kiss a bootleg commodity. No longer can friend and friend, husband and wife, or lover and sweetheart relieve their surcharge of emotion by osculation. Scientists and doctors have proved that the kiss is the liveliest transmitter of the deadly germs of colds, coughs and flu, and Russia has triumphantly legislated this popular in-and-outdoor sport into oblivion. At least, she hopes she has.

Shall America follow suit? Shall Utah follow suit? Shall the U. A. C. prohibit kissing? Scientists say it is deadly. It is dangerous. Everyone with a cold is open to grave suspicion. Is America to lag behind unwashed Russia in sanitary precautions?

The following gem we quote from the Mercer Cluster:

IF

You kiss a miss

And taste the bliss

Of love's deliciousness,

You surely chance

A graveyard dance

For your officiousness.

SO

Just miss the kiss

And hark to this:

By your stern deprivation

You miss the germs.

That go with osculation.

These Infant Prodigies Are A Marvelous Lot

It is a comparatively simple affair to bring a child into the world. It is another matter to bring up a child once you have him. Civilized society is more or less agreed that here Nature needs much assistance, much understanding. Child education is as prolific a subject as any other dear to the heart of man for public theorizing wise and otherwise.

Last week, one Mrs. Winifred Sackville Stoner Jr. permitted herself to be interviewed by newspaper reporters about a book she was just completing to set forth the "unquestionably" evil influence exerted by popular nursery jingles upon infants' minds. Mother Goose herself was the object of Mrs. Stoner's determined attack and the reporters were told, in no uncertain tones, that:

Simple Simon, meeting a plover and making a request the economic premise of which was visibly fallacious, "glorified stupidity."

Little Jack Horner sitting in his corner and eating with his fingers, incites bad table-manners.

The spider in Little Miss Muffitt and the lupine ancestors in Little Red Riding Hood breed fear-complexes.

The exciting verse—

Jack be nimble, Jack be quick,
Jack jump over the candlestick—

"puts ideas into children's heads... they might kill themselves, or at least do themselves bodily injury."

The tragic verse—

Tom, Tom, the Piper's son
Stole a pig and away he run.
The pig was fat and Tom was bent
And Tom went howling down the street—

is obviously "bad grammar, bad morals."

"I chiefly object," said earnest Mrs. Stoner, "to teaching children such nonsense because it misrepresents life... It is not only criminal to do so but it helps to make criminals of children." Then, to show that she was not merely a destructive critic, Mrs. Stoner recited one of the numerous "jingle facts" that she has written in hope of ousting Mother Goose:

Every perfect person owns
Just two hundred and six bones.

Also:

In 1732
George Washington first said boo-hoo!

A day or two after the Stoner interview appeared, one Kitty Cheatham purchased four full columns of advertising space in another newspaper. Kitty Cheatham was bound that Mrs. Stoner should not enjoy exclusive credit for the great Mother Goose expose. Kitty Cheatham wrote in her large advertisement:

"Perhaps Mrs. Stoner does not know that this idea... it is not new, but has been radically advanced, logically analyzed and fearlessly uprooted in an illuminating children's book entitled Greetings and a Message to the Dear Children, by Augusta E. Stetson, C. S. D. (Doctor of Christian Science)... in this lovely book, the author... enables a child to think intelligently, in response to the law of God, or Spirit."

"During her 22 years of close association with children in the Sunday School of her church, First Church of Christ Scientist, New York City, Mrs. Stetson devoted her tireless efforts... But to return to Mother Goose... let me quote the following from Mrs. Stetson's book:

"When the bough breaks, the cradle will fall"—no wonder that it (a baby) awoke in the night. Nursery or mother might have thought baby had a stomach ache and given it peppermint tea, but we know that it was fear that awakened baby, and only love destroys fear... What a stretch of the imagination asking a child to believe that a heavy mooley cow could jump over the moon! Think of a Kitty playing a fiddle and then try to convince the child that a dish could run away with a spoon... Thus the children's sweet faith was lessened and they were made to doubt and distrust... Mother Goose was indeed a goose....

...Did you ever awake early some morning, while it was yet dark, and hear the milkman rattle the bottles as he left a nice milk for your breakfast—and as you snuggled in your little bed did you send out to the milkman a loving thought, a grateful thought, and ask God to keep him happy and warm?

Kitty Cheatham went on quoting from Mrs. Stetson's "tender and logical" book, showed how Mrs. Stoner had illustrated her points with parallels from the Bible Testament, and urged in place of—

Now I lay me down to sleep;
I pray the Lord my soul to keep
If I should die before I wake
I pray the Lord my soul to take

Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy's fearless Christian Science prayer:

Father—Mother God, loving me—
Guard me when I sleep;
Guide my little feet up to Thee.

Then Kitty Cheatham confided that she herself had a revised Mother Goose, "whose happy secrets I will tell later."

Before her as she wrote her advertisement came "the earnest faces of the 14,000 students of the University of Berlin, representing 17 nationalities before whom I was invited to sing and speak by the official heads of the University (I being the only American artist who had been thus invited)." And she wound up: "Never have I been so imbued with the desire to bring joy, to elevate the children through my art, my pen and my deep religious convictions; and I am more earnest, interested and active than ever since I know that thought is force and governs all and I shall inculcate this in my recitals (which I am about to resume)...."

Mrs. Stoner Jr. (Mrs. Charles P. de Bruche), aged 22, was raised by her mother to be a prodigy. She has made impromptu speeches in public since the age of four. She has written for publication since the age of five. Her books include Padrino Anserino (Mother Goose in Esperanto written at the age of six), animal stories, children's histories, volumes of fact-jingles. The mother of Mrs. de Bruche is Mrs. James B. Stoner of Norfolk, Va., "founder of the Natural Education System." Mrs. Stoner attributes the brilliance of her daughter in no small part to the fact she taught the child to typewrite at the age of three. Mrs. Stoner recommends typewriters as substitutes for rattles.

Mother Goose is not an imaginary personage. She actually lived in Boston in the 17th Century. Born Elizabeth Foster, she married one Isaac Vergoose (or Goose), a Boston widower "with eight or ten children." Becoming Mother Goose to these and "six or more" children of her own this menage really lent itself to the tale of The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe.

Mother Goose's son-in-law, one T. Fleet, a printer, wrote down the songs he heard her sing, and in 1719 published a book from his own press entitled Songs for the Nursery or Mother Goose's Melody for Children.

Puzzles Arouse Fight Instinct

Nine letters meaning "fight"—"pugnacity" that's it, and the struggle with the cross-word puzzle is on. This fighting instinct, according to Dr. Jau Don Ball, psychiatrist and criminologist, is the main impetus that fires people with the desire to solve the word puzzle, and the rapid growth in the number of puzzle fans can be attributed to the combative interest aroused by the puzzle.

To illustrate his point Dr. Ball cites the following as an example: "Try to get a crowd to attend a lecture on a scientific subject. Perhaps 75 people will come, perhaps less. Compare this to the audience of ninety thousand that turn out to witness a football game in which twenty-two men battle for the pleasure of the ninety thousand. How do you account for the difference? It's because most of us love a fight and each of us have a certain amount of that combative spirit in our make-up. Among the modern football audience you will find thousands of cross-word puzzle fans and the same type of challenge to fight arouses interest in both instances."

Dr. Ball believes that the puzzle is not a time and energy waster. "It is all right," he says, "Anything that arouses interest is bound to have something of value to it. Besides the puzzle may serve as a means of increasing vocabulary, as a relaxation and as an outlet for excess energy to each of these it offers a worth while service."

The psychiatrist believes that from a pathological standpoint the cross-word puzzle would have little or no use because the mentally defective are not likely to have the necessary mental requirements for the right kind of concentration.

When asked if he had ever attempted to solve a puzzle, Dr. Ball said that he had not, but it was because he had never had occasion to attempt one and because his time and energy were monopolized by other activities.

In conclusion Dr. Ball said: "As long as a thing is used as a means to an end and not as an end in itself it can be of value to an individual and this is true of the cross-word puzzle."
